Why Connections?

Information access, privacy, security and management issues are intertwined with almost everything that Manitoba public bodies and trustees do, whether it is dealing with general information or personal information governed by The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FIPPA) or personal health information governed by The Personal Health Information Act (PHIA).

The Manitoba Connections Conference recognizes the benefits that can be gained by breaking down the silos and bringing these information disciplines together in one conference.

Through a series of plenary, breakout and workshop sessions, delegates will:

- gain a clearer understanding of access to information, protection of privacy, information security and information management issues that may arise in organizations
- improve their knowledge and strengthen their skills in these areas
- find practical solutions to help meet the information challenges within these interconnected disciplines
- get up to speed on emerging issues and trends
- improve the connections between these areas within their workplaces

Who is this conference for?

This conference has been developed for people who deal with information and work in public bodies and trustee organizations, such as:

- provincial departments and agencies
- municipal governments
- health care facilities and regional health authorities
- school divisions
- universities and colleges

This includes employees who work in the following areas:

- access to information
- information privacy
- information/records management
- information technology
- information security
- program management/administration
- direct service delivery
- policy analysis
- program analysis
- human resources
- legal
- communications

What will the conference offer?

An advisory committee, with input from the community that attends, is planning 25+ sessions with 35+ speakers over two days. Delegates will be able to customize their own learning path by choosing from a selection of sessions. There will be optional half-day pre-conference workshops being held the morning of September 27, to enable delegates to explore issues in-depth.

How do I register?

There are registration options for conference only (1 ½ days), conference plus half-day workshop (2 days) or workshop only (½ day).
